PHD COURSE with the Urban Theology Union in partnership with York St John University and Luther King Centre

At the Urban Theology Union in Sheffield (UTU) you can do a full-time or part-time PhD research degree in theology and its related disciplines, suitable for clergy and lay practitioners of any denomination. Your research can engage directly on your own context, grow out of the writings and reflections of others. It is your chance to pursue your passion; to explore in depth an issue or question that fascinates you; and to make a positive contribution to our knowledge and understanding.

Throughout your studies you will have access to supervisors and peer-supported learning at UTU, as well as at York St John and Luther King Centre, and you will find that we are passionately committed to using the insights of urban, liberation and other contextual theologies in engaging with practice, scripture, and the realities of church life. Recent research topics have included urban mission, Fresh Expressions, disability, child abuse, Anglican socialism and welfare, refugees, and parish ministry.
